March 9, 2020

AAS Books Now Distributed by Columbia University Press

The AAS is proud to announce its new partnership with Columbia University Press. AAS books will now be distributed worldwide by Columbia University Press.

A recent review of the AAS publications program brought a number of questions, ideas, and opportunities to the fore—ways in which we can better serve our members and the profession. Our mission has always been to run a sustainable publishing program and to serve the academy by providing high quality educational and scholarly resources at a reasonable price. Joining Columbia’s extensive sales and marketing program worldwide will help us in this mission by providing AAS books with much broader reach in terms of visibility and influence.

AAS books advance important original research on Asia, bring leading scholarship to audiences beyond the academy, and support teaching and learning in Asian studies. AAS publishes three book series, which will appeal to scholars, to teachers at all levels, as well as to anyone with an interest in Asia:

- the new ASIA SHORTS series offers concise, engagingly-written titles written by highly-qualified authors on topics of significance in Asian Studies. Topics are intended to be substantive, generate discussion and debate within the field, and attract interest beyond it.

- the KEY ISSUES IN ASIAN STUDIES series, which offers vital educational materials that are both accessible and affordable for classroom use. Key Issues books tackle broad subjects or major cultural and historical themes in an introductory but compelling, jargon-free style appropriate for survey courses, written to encourage classroom debate and discussion.

- the ASIA PAST & PRESENT series, which is the AAS scholarly monograph series, featuring titles from all disciplines and all areas of Asia.

AAS MEMBERS will receive their regular discounts on all AAS titles, as well as all books published by Columbia University Press. To receive your 20% AAS member discount, use the code AASMEMBER at checkout. BOOKSELLERS: please see https://cup.columbia.edu/for-booksellers

Asian Studies is one of the core publishing areas for Columbia. Renowned scholar Wm. Theodore de Bary edited four influential anthologies published by the Press: Sources of Indian Tradition, Sources of Japanese Tradition, Sources of Chinese Tradition, and Sources of Korean Tradition (joined more recently by Sources of Vietnamese Tradition and Sources of Tibetan Tradition). Columbia has also published dozens of standard-setting translations: from Donald Keene’s translation of Four Major Plays of Chikamatsu to The Art of War: Sun Zi’s Military Methods, translated by Victor Mair.

- AUTHORS: If you are interested in authoring a title for publication by AAS, a Call for Proposals for each series appears on the AAS website, www.asianstudies.org.

- INSTRUCTORS: desk and exam copies are available upon written request: please visit https://cup.columbia.edu/for-instructors.

- REVIEWERS: to obtain a review copy of any AAS title, please visit https://cup.columbia.edu/for-reviewers

If you have questions, please contact AAS Publications Manager, Jonathan Wilson, at jwilson@asianstudies.org.